Mansfield Company Completes Major IT Project

A Mansfield company, Geostream Solutions Ltd is bucking the trend in the business world by succeeding in the difficult current economic climate. With small businesses being lauded as the economy's best hope to lead Britain out of the current financial crisis, small but lean firms like Geostream are showing the way.

The Mansfield company were formed in 2001 and have steadily grown since by keeping ahead of their competitors through a program of rigorous training of its employees and an environment of creative hard work. Recently acquiring and completing contracts with major players in British business, Geostream have proved that though they may be small, they are perfectly formed to succeed.

Geostream has just completed a major IT Infrastructure Design & Implementation project for Belron® International Limited at its new 36,000 sq ft headquarters at Milton Park, Egham.

Belron® is the world's leading vehicle and glass repair and replacement company, owning many well-known brands in the industry including Autoglass® in the UK.

Matthew Caunt, Director of Geostream said, “It is a great accolade that a trusted and leading company like Belron® have put their faith in Geostream. We strive for excellence in our work and we are proud that we offer the highest standard of service to our customers.”

A spokesperson from Belron® said, “Geostream have been working with the Belron Group since 2007 starting with our UK businesses Autoglass® and Laddaw, and more recently with our corporate office Belron International. They have provided a number of services, from contract support and maintenance on data centre hosted environments, to playing a key role in a programme that moved two offices into a brand new build; they have even provided us an Interim Network Manager at very short notice. The key to our successful relationship with Geostream is that it feels like we’re genuinely working in partnership and that they understand our processes, our infrastructure and our culture. Whilst Geostream are a small organisation, we’ve found them to be a very competent actor in a larger one.”

Geostream Solutions Ltd of Mansfield say they hope to continue their growth in to next year, providing the highest quality service, and hope to be part of the movement of small businesses that lead the way out of the UK’s financial straits.
